".... Calamity Janes offer up honey-sweet sounds via gorgeous harmonies. Calling Waxahachie home, such a group-vocal gift simply isn't heard much around this part of the state in the clubs very often...." - Kelly Dearmore
(Dallas Observer)

"... their EP captures the energy, displays their songwriting, and gives us the defining characteristics that make them stand out. A toe-tapping, old school flavored country sound spews at us from the get go ..." –
OneStopCountry- Nashville

Calamity Janes | High Energy Texas Country

This trio of sisters is exactly what comes to mind when you think sassy Texas singer/songwriters- sassy and bold, gritty and clever. With signature three part blood harmonies rooted in church music from their childhood influenced by bluegrass, soul, classic rock and old school country with a big dose of their own ideas about Red Dirt/Texas music and solid song writing, The Calamity Janes have established a style that is truly all their own.

The Janes have spent much of the last four years cutting their teeth on the road playing venues and festivals such as House of Blues, American Airlines Center, Larry Joe Taylor Music Festival among others. The Janes have also also recorded and performed with national artists and musicians and collaborated in studio with award winning producers Bart Rose of Fort Worth Sound and Grammy Award winner, Sam Taylor of Wilde Silas Musicworks.

After receiving top notch reviews of their debut EP "Roots and Wings" from the Dallas Observer, OneStopCountry out of Nashville and several other notable sources, the Janes burned up the Texas Regional Radio Charts with their first single "One of Those Nights" peaking at #35. Now on their forth radio single, a true life divorce story inspired by the real life "Middle Sister"- a true honky-tonk tune- The Janes are taking the country by storm, blazing a trail all their own and not looking back.
